

SPEECH, LANGUAGE AND LEARNING

A CONVERSATION WITH

LISA KLEIN M.S., CCC-SLP COM

Children develop communication skills during their first years. They learn to associate sounds with their sources, and start using their tongue, lips, and palate to make gurgles, and long vowel sounds —precursors to those exciting first words.

Two- and three-year-olds are not only increasing their vocabularies, but beginning to recognize speech patterns heard since birth. Join Speech Therapist Lisa Klein as she provides insight on child speech development. She will share what she assesses in her practice, simple things parents can do at home to stimulate a healthy development, and what signs and indications to be aware of.
